

Abstract.

We present the nontrivial consequences of application of the new fundamental discipline establishing unity of laws of energy transfer or transformation of different forms of energy one into another. We show the gist of contradiction between these consequences conclusions of some fundamental disciplines and ways for resolving these contradictions. We refer to the theoretical and experimental papers confirming conclusions of the presented theory and discuss the specific manner in which it can be tested.